OSCIL PROGRAMS - 2015

▪ Information and Referral

OSCIL provides information on community resources and services to persons with disabilities and their families, service providers, and the general public, as well as receiving referrals for our agency for direct services. Information is provided by phone, email, mail, and one-on-one to walk-ins to our Center. Additional information is provided in our quarterly newsletter, Signs of Independence, which is available in paper format or on our website at www.oscil.org.

▪ Peer Support

OSCIL offers opportunities for persons with disabilities to share similar interests and concerns and gain greater awareness and control over their lives.

▪ Independent Living Skills Training

OSCIL staff assist consumers in setting goals for self-sufficiency in the home, which may involve basic everyday life skills training including budgeting, meal preparation, arranging transportation, and/or self-advocacy. Life skills training is goal directed and does not involve long-term case management or therapeutic intervention.

▪ Advocacy

OSCIL provides both individual and systems advocacy services. Individuals are provided information and support to become self-advocates.

▪ Transition Services

Community Living Option/Nursing Home Transition – assists persons with disabilities who are self-directed to move from a nursing home setting to a less restrictive environment. Support services may include assisting with finding accessible housing, establishing community connections, securing personal care attendant services, accessing public transportation services, acquiring appropriate assistive technology and home safety devices, and other community support services.

Young Adult Services – assisting young adults (18 – 24) to develop skills to transition to community independence. OSCIL will provide basic independent living skills training, information on disability and community resources, establish a group for young adult to address barriers to independence and promote peer support, outreach to area high schools, colleges and disability organizations to establish a referral path.

▪ Home Accessibility and Adaptive Equipment

This program allows eligible consumers to maintain independence in their homes and communities by providing adaptive equipment or home modifications to remove barriers to independence, i.e. ramps, grab bars, stairlifts, handrails, tub modifications. Income & resource eligibility limits apply.

▪ Assistive Technology Access Partnership (ATAP)

A partner in the Assistive Technology Access Partnership (ATAP), OSCIL provides elders and persons with disabilities with information on how assistive devices may enhance their independence. OSCIL's website features an "AT page" with in-depth information about AT. OSCIL also maintains an inventory of various types of AT available to the public for short or long term loan.

▪ Assessment Services

OSCIL offers assessment services as requested by private individuals, vendors, Medicaid and State agencies. Assessments provide recommendations for specialized equipment, home modifications and/or services that are required for the consumer to attain goals for independence in the home, school and/or workplace.

▪ Housing

OSCIL provides assistance to persons with disabilities to locate affordable and/or accessible housing, including subsidized apartments, assistive living facilities, and information on community resources for home buying assistance. OSCIL's housing program also assists individuals to overcome personal barriers to independence, including assistance in understanding and acquiring assistive devices to increase independence in the home.

▪ Deaf Services

OSCIL offers a variety of services to the Deaf community, including advocacy services, citizenship training, driver education to prepare for the computerized exam, housing assistance, and general assistance with accessing benefits, i.e. Social Security, medical, SNAP benefits. OSCIL also offers training to groups and individuals in the use of video phone, CapTel phone and Relay Service.

▪ Resource Center

OSCIL is a designated location for "The Point," RI's Aging and Disability Resource Center, offering information on disability resources as well as being a satellite walk-in site offering one-to-one services for persons seeking disability-related information.

▪ Gift of Hearing

OSCIL has joined in a collaborative effort with the University of Rhode Island (URI) Speech & Hearing Center to bring low cost hearing aids to those individuals who qualify. OSCIL can assist with the acquisition of low-cost hearing aids at a very affordable price, through a self-pay option.

▪ Disability Awareness - Sensitivity Training - Community Outreach

OSCIL conducts disability awareness trainings in a variety of settings as well as offering Deaf Culture Sensitivity training. In addition, OSCIL staff participates in senior citizen and disability-related events throughout RI, conducting AT demonstrations, formal and informal group presentations and hosting informational exhibits and displays.
